1. With the National Economic Council expected to establish new policies at any time, it has been reported that the Argentine government has already embarked on an economy campaign. Several government agencies have been prohibited from making any more purchases of material, and work on many projects of the Five-Year Plan has ceased.
 2. It has been further reported that Miguel Miranda, former president of the National Economic Council, succeeded in transferring 800,000,000 pesos (sic) from Argentina to foreign countries. President Peron learned from a preliminary investigation that Miranda has left practically none of his personal assets in Argentina. Even his properties have been mortgaged.
